

Rules for organizing classes using distance learning methods and techniques

Field, form, and level of study: PHILOSOPHY MA Cycle starting from the academic year: 2026/2027

1. Classes will be held using distance learning methods and techniques, i.e., part of the classes will be remote, and part will be stationary at the university's premises.
2. Classes in the remote form will take place via the MS Teams platform. They will be implemented at hours convenient for students (afternoon or evening).
3. Classes in the stationary form will take place in the form of two three-week sessions throughout the entire study cycle. In each academic year, one three-week session will be held. The sessions will take place in June 2027 and June 2028. During both sessions, 240 teaching hours will be implemented.
4. The diploma examination will be conducted at the university's premises.
5. Applying for admission to the field of study using distance learning methods and techniques is equivalent to:
  - expressing consent to learning with the use of distance learning methods and techniques, i.e., using the equipment necessary for active participation in classes (camera turned on, working microphone, MS Teams application installed, stable internet connection),
  - a statement that the student is ready to provide the equipment, software, and internet access on their own.